To whom it may concern,

This past year, beginning in October 2009, I had the privilege, nay the honor, to work and be trained as a branch manager of College Work Painting. But in all honesty, the entrepreneur experience that I have obtained is non-rivalable to an uncanny level of indistinguishable measure.

College Works trained the rising branch managers in every aspect of starting a small painting business: from marketing, to effective sales tactics, to inter-personal clientele skills, to hiring and managing painters, and finally to producing beautiful paint jobs, we were led carefully step-by-step to see our success through to the end.

If you are looking for an internship this summer in which you can learn on a first-hand basis the possible ups and downs of running your own business, I definitely recommend College Works Painting.

Sincerely,

James Harris
